Porsche Classic has given this new edition of the tool bag a spectacular late-1970s look. The original was made solely from synthetic leather, but the current tool bag is crafted from black natural leather and red tartan fabric.

The fabric pattern is based on a typical seat cover from that era. Following the initial development of tool bags for the Porsche 356 and the 911 F, the range now also includes tool bags for subsequent 911 models. This is because these vehicles in particular have certain special features, such as the tow eye, which is designed as a bayonet hook with a separate short instruction leaflet in the form of an original trailer with a simplex hook.

Of course, in this new bag too, all the tools have their own dedicated pockets. The screwdriver handles are, as before, made of yellow plastic, but now feature the Porsche logo. To make them easier to use, Porsche Classic has replaced the original spark plug tool with a more practical ratchet set featuring a special spark plug socket.
